

Trumps words, opposition, and Cuba official interpretation

US intentions with Cuba

MIAMI, 23.06.2017, 23:56 Time

USPA NEWS - Cuba is having his usual tantrum when any US president makes an approach to that country that they cannot support like the last words of Donald Trump. And they cannot support anything thought-out by America to improve Cuba's economics, politics, social, and cultural development in a way that will not go to enlarge the old tile of Castro's socialism, and will drive the country toward new reformism goals. The president words had themselves possibilities of transformational changes to improve Cuba. What? Raúl Castro does not like those projects? So, why Cuba is making changes directed by Raúl Castro himself? Well, in the first place, he is making transformations to fit what he supposes and hopes to be the Cuban socialism of the future. And although he knows, like everyone else, that the future will bring new technologies. He does not know, like most, what the future will bring to Cuba and world society. It is almost a mathematical matter inside an esoteric mass.

So, why Cuba is making changes directed by Raúl Castro himself? Well, in the first place, he is making transformations to fit what he supposes and hopes to be the Cuban socialism of the future. And although he knows, like everyone else, that the future will bring new technologies. He does not know, like most, what the future will bring to Cuba and world society. It is almost a mathematical matter inside an esoteric mass.

The new society of the world that approaching us, is already making itself with the instruments of the present and the future. Cuba cannot take secret roads out of the developing Technology.

The new society of the world that approaching us, is already making itself with the instruments of the present and the future. Cuba cannot take secret roads out of the developing Technology. They would build a socialist building with secret capitalist intention, but semi-knocked and falling"; and its whole economics columns will collapse.

Although Raúl Castro hopes that a technological socialism will be the future of Cuba, deviating from what the actual Technology has in the world today, and its social and economic work in the universal transmutations. We will be see an open Technology modality will has a direct impact in Cuban's social body, despite the thinking of Raúl Castro. And it will develop in the whole Cuban society but in other path that Technological Socialism. Would Cuban literature will have any impact with this Technology development? Of course. Better PCs: not heavies, faster, easy to work.

For CubaMiami everything is getting hot. The writers of El Nuevo Herald, some with cold war mentality, grant little or no possibility of futuristic transformation to Cuba because of the president's words and would like strong actions. The marines in Cuba? Those times are over. Now, prevailing actions whose speeches perspective are to be interpreted, and which is difficult for the Cubans of too common sense. Prospects probably divergent from those of the Cuban stroller known by El Andarín Carvajal who participated in a "straight line" in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries in the Olympics and World Marathons and won more than 57 awards. Will we get any?

Another Cuban group, this one of the University of Miami, met solemnly for decrypting the President's words as if it were a cryptogram. I do not think they can. They are theoretical. No action appears to them in Cuba. They look naive crosswords. I was at the forefront of the student and urban struggle against Batista, in the first line against Castro's socialism, and in the front trench in Cuba's political prisons"; and even for me is like a tiger in the jungle"; waiting. Anyway, I can see these presidential words inside a linguistic tangle to cover two different fronts: the Cubans opposition with strong political language, and the Cuban Communist in the island with strong political language. Without some experience I had, or without some political, military, revolutionary actions... anyone can gets lost in the meanders of the Cuban political galaxy. Cuba will be in a path way unknown, but like some Asian countries, they can choose the label of socialism like a self-deceive, and it can walk toward a social and industrial neo-capitalist society.

By the way, Raúl Castro wants to believe that Cuba's future will be drawn with the technological socialism, but nevertheless, he knows that the becoming will transform the country into something unknown, which neither he, or anyone else, can understand yet, even though it is right because it sounds as the song of Willy Chirino: Ya viene llegendando!
